Our History

Originally a Tavern called “The Three Mariners” which was burnt down in 1601 fire that swept London Street. The building was rebuilt as a Inn with the heraldic symbol of the Red Lion. The archway which is still there today allowed stage coaches through to the yard where stables existed.

In 1956, with the stables demolished to allow the motor car to park the Inn was advertising as having 16 rooms for visitors. Bed and Breakfast was 20 shillings.

Over the years further extensions and conversions were carried out and after a serious fire at the rear of the hotel a new wing was built with 30 bedrooms.

Today the hotel boasts 61 bedrooms and multiple function rooms. The old gated archway still remains allowing access to our main entrance and courtyard.

The Festival Suite was renovated to a high standard in February 2020 just before the covid pandemic.
